Dr. Ben Hilbun Of State College Dies In Jackson

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI)—Dr. Ben Hilbun, president emeritus of Mississippi State University, died today at the age of 73.

Hilbun died at University Hospital here. He was admitted to the hospital last Friday for an examination and became seriously ill a short time later.

Hilbun, known affectionately to many as "Mr. Ben," was one of the state's best known educators.

A former student and staff member of Mississippi State, he became the university's 11th president in July 1953 and was appointed its first president emeritus upon his retirement in November 1960.

At the time of his death, Hilbun was chairman of the Mississippi Industrial and Technological Research Commission.

Hilbun kept an office on the campus of the Starkville university where he spent most of his adult life.

A native of Jones County, Hilbun enrolled at Mississippi State after military service in World War I and received his bachelor of science degree in 1923.

After two years as secretary of the Starkville Chamber of Commerce, Hilbun returned to Mississippi State to handle public relations work. He was named registrar in 1936 and administrative assistant to President Fred Mitchell in 1949.

After Mitchell's death, Hilbun became one of the few college presidents without a doctor's degree. However, the following year Mississippi College at Clinton awarded him an honorary doctor of laws degree.

"This agreement satisfies the chief reason for protests I have heard," Judge Corban said, "the question of whether or not the city can furnish services in proportion to the taxes it will collect in the area."

The city agreed to furnish fire and police protection in the area immediately, with mosquito control to follow in the spring. Also, street lights and street lettering are to be installed at an early date.

The residents will also have water and sewer service before the first taxes are collected, as a result of the county bond issue.

Two sections of the Bayou Casotte area will be taken into the city Jan. 2, 1964. These two sections, containing the Bel Air Shopping Center and the L and N Railroad right of way, will not pay ad valorum taxes until 1965, but the city will begin to collect sales taxes immediately after the annexation date.

The annexation will include 3,500 acres when in full effect, and will increase the land area of Pascagoula by about one-half.

The truck was carrying two cannisters of sand from Idaho to New Mexico as part of a "dry run" of nuclear waste shipments bound for the new Waste Isolation Pilot Plant.

Battle of nuclear waste dump heads to courts

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) —

The one thing that both sides in the fight over a nuclear waste dump in the New Mexico desert can agree on is that the courts will be the next battlefield.

The Environmental Protection

Agency certified the $2 billion Waste Isolation Pilot Plant on Wednesday, saying the facility in the salt beds near Carlsbad is safe to store plutonium-contaminated material from the nation's Cold War defense work.

Energy Secretary Federico Pena promptly notified Congress that the agency intends to open the repository. The first shipment is expected June 19.

Environmentalists say that won't happen. They have promised a legal challenge to halt the opening of the 2,150-foot-deep repository and say a federal injunction in place since 1992 will prevent shipments for now.

The radioactive garbage destined for WIPP is largely stored above ground at 23 sites in 16 states. Officials from both the DOE and EPA say they're confident they can win any legal battle, and say the current above-ground storage was never meant to be permanent.

"Everyone's telling us it's really dangerous to leave this stuff around these interim sites, and the minute we have a site ... they don't seem to want us to solve the problem," said

George Dials, DOE's Carlsbad area manager.

WIPP is expected to receive 37,000 shipments over its 30-year life. Once a room is filled with waste, its roof and walls will collapse within 10 years, encapsulating the material in salt.

The repository has many supporters in Carlsbad, a community of 27,000 that has seen economic growth, new roads and jobs from the project that's been in the works for 24 years. But there are opponents in New Mexico's capital of Santa Fe, known for its art and New Age image.

Don Hancock of the Southwest Research and Information Center, a leading opponent of WIPP, contends DOE cannot open the site next month because of the 6-year-old injunction.

"WIPP's not going to open next month or the month after that or any time soon," he said.

But Cooper Wayman, attorney for DOE's Carlsbad office, said that injunction covers only mixed waste — radioactive waste that also contains hazardous chemicals such as cleaning solvents.

Though most of the 850,000 55-gallon drums of waste eventually expected at WIPP would be mixed waste, Wayman said the Energy Department can ship radioactive waste that has no chemical elements.

15 plead guilty in beer bust

By ROBBIE ROBERTSON

Mississippi Press City Editor

PASCAGOULA — Fifteen people pleaded guilty Wednesday to selling beer and alcohol to minors in city court here and will face a $170-fine each.

Three others had court hearings set for a later date. One person, Sheila Williams of 4900 Old Mobile Highway, Apt. No. R131 pleaded not guilty and will have a hearing June 3.

Pascagoula Police Chief Mike Whitmore said today that after the remaining four cases have been heard they will sit down with city attorney Melvin Mitchell and discuss whether or not they wanted to prosecute the permit holders.

"The problem is that the permit holder is not always the store owner," Whitmore said. "At some of these places, it may be a lawyer with some corporate firm. We want to be fair about this and not just pick out the easy ones."

Leading guilty Wednesday were:

- Cheryl Gordon Exxon, U.S. 90.
- Gwen Hardy, EZ Serve, Ingalls and 14th Street.

HURRICANE PLANE — NOAA pilot Jeff Hagan, left, in Tampa, Fla., escorts students onto NOAA's newest hurricane surveillance plane, a Gulfstream G-IV SP-N49RF at MacDill AFB howls into the season's first hurricane and threatens land in the Caribbean or the United States, a high-altitude jet loaded with new forecasting technology should greatly improve the odds.

The Gulfstream IV jet that will take off from Tampa's MacDill Air Force Base can fly much higher and faster than the Hercules WC-130 four-engine turboprop the Air Force now flies directly into the eyes of hurricanes. The Hercules flies at 1,500 to 10,000 feet at a top speed of about 370 mph; the Gulfstream will fly over and around storm systems at altitudes of 45,000 feet and speeds up to 500 mph.

"It will have a substantial impact on forecasts in the future," said Bob Sheets, who headed the National Hurricane Center when Andrew hit and is now a hurricane consultant. "What we've lacked all these years is the data from around the hurricane. It's going to improve the 24-, 36- and 48-hour forecasts substantially."

The new jet, named Gonzo after the Muppet character, cost $23 million and took 19 years to design especially for forecasters.

With hurricane season beginning June 1, however, Sheets now fears that budget uncertainties could keep the plane on the ground more often than it flies. Each nine-hour hurricane flight, with a crew of up to a dozen, costs $22,500.

The Commerce Department recently restored full funding to the hurricane service and other National Weather Service entities after congressional threats to cut funds brought howls of protests from hurricane-prone states.

"The critical problem is whether we will have enough money to fly it," Sheets said. "It would be upsetting to see that resource sitting there and not be able to use it."

But Jim McFadden, who oversees the Gulfstream jet as hurricane manager for the Commerce Department, said money questions won't ground the plane.

"If the flight is needed, it will be flown," he said.

The jet's mission: to measure atmospheric data high above and around storm. That information is then transmitted to the National Weather Service in Washington, where it's fed into computer tracking models.

"For the first time, we're going to have information that defines the river of air that steers the hurricane," said Max Mayfield, a hurricane forecaster in Miami.

If this high-altitude jet had been available in 1992, New Orleans might have been spared the urgent warnings and expensive preparations, Sheets said.

"The economic benefit is one of the real keys," McFadden said.

Police probe Point shooting

Robert L. Evans, 38, 1625 Main St., Moss Point, was admitted to Singing River Hospital early Saturday morning in fair condition after he was shot in the parking lot of Lela's Place on West Bayou St.

Patrolman Thomas Peifer said he arrived at the parking lot about 1:26 a.m., within minutes after the shooting occurred, and found Evans had been taken to the hospital by a private vehicle.

The officer said, "I learned nothing at the scene." However, he added a witness stopped him and related Evans was shot by a young black man who fled the area in a late model, yellow Ford automobile. Peifer quoted the witness as also saying another man and a woman were also in the car.

Evans was shot with a small caliber handgun, according to Peifer.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense officials said Saturday they would be surprised to see U.S. and Soviet negotiators reach agreement this on a new Strategic Arms Limit Treaty, despite President Carter's optimism.

The officials also are reserving judgment on whether the two countries have made balancing concessions seeking a new treaty, adding that they are awaiting the outcome of further negotiations on many unsettled nettle issues before reaching that judgment.

In telling reporters their doubts that a new SALT treaty can be signed this year, the officials took what appears to be another step backward from optimistic forecasts by Carter about a month ago.

Carter had predicted that "within a few weeks we will have a SALT agreement that will be the pride of the country." He later modified his position, saying there is "a fairly good prospect" of a description of the gene-
